

Dear Chairman Powell and Commissioners,

As a citizen who wants to be informed about the political and electoral issues that affect my life, I am greatly disappointed by the lack of informative television programming.

Local public affairs programming is virtually non-existent--constituting less than one half of 1% of all local programming. More than half of news broadcasts prior to the 2002 elections did not include a single campaign story. Our democracy is at risk when many Americans don't know basic facts about the candidates or the issues, as was the case in the 2000 elections.

One of the biggest mistakes in recent years was the repeal of the "Fairness Doctrine" which required broadcasters to allow free time for opposing views.

Since broadcasters have clearly failed in their obligation to serve the public interest, the FCC should define meaningful public interest requirements that include local civic and electoral affairs programming. At a minimum, broadcasters should air three hours per week of local civic and electoral affairs programming, with at least two hours devoted to substantive election coverage in the six weeks prior to Election Day.

As the elections approach, a well-functioning democracy demands that citizens have access to a diversity of opinions and voices on the choices confronting us.

Frankly, we need a change in the laws, a change that would outright PROHIBIT political advertising on TV, just the way we currently prohibit tobacco commercials. Instead, all broadcasters should be REQUIRED to provide FREE time to political candidates to present their views.

Sincerely,

Will Stuiivenga
